ROCKVILLE, MD – CNSI, a fast-growing provider of innovative IT business solutions for government and commercial enterprises, today announced that CNSI's Corporate HIPAA Security Officer, Lance Kelson, will address the Washington, DC chapter of Society for Software Quality regarding "Certification and Accreditation".

WHO: Lance Kelson, HIPAA Security Officer, CNSI

Lance Kelson is a Certified Information Systems Security Professional (CISSP) and a Project Management Professional (PMP). He has performed Certification and Accreditations (C&A) for applications implemented at the Department of Homeland Security and the Library of Congress. Kelson is also a faculty member of Webster University, teaching a graduate level Information System Security course. He received a B.S. degree in Industrial Engineering from Arizona State University and an M.B.A. in Finance and Operations Management from the University of Rochester.

WHAT: "Certification and Accreditation Made Simple" This presentation will emphasize how the risk to the organization in operating a system drives the accreditation decision. Kelson will outline a road map of the C&A steps, referencing the National Institute of Standards and Technology (NIST) standards. He will also provide a brief overview of the NIST SP 800-53 family of controls and describe the requisite documentation contained in the certification package presented for accreditation.

WHEN: Thursday, February 15, 2007 at 7 p.m.

WHERE: MITRE, 7515 Colshire Drive, McLean, Virginia
